LEADING THROUGH CRISIS

Issue 1

HOW BATON ROUGE'S LEADING INSTITUTIONS WORK FOR A VIBRANT, THRIVING CITY

Many of the city's leading organizations have had to significantly adjust their operations due to COVID19. While many continue to work to find new and innovative ways to serve you, the response won't be "a straight line". Read on to find out how BREC, CATS, EBR Housing Authority and others have responded to our city's latest crisis.

BREC

COREY WILSON

To protect the health and safety of Baton Rouge citizens, we closed the BREC facilities on March 23 after consulting with local leaders and park and rec leaders across the country.

Parks and trails are still available to people for walking, hiking, riding and other activities while practicing physical distancing and we have created a virtual portal to allow citizens to still experience some of BREC's activities from the comfort of their homes. Visit BREC Refresh to find workout suggestions, meditation videos and our BREC coloring book and more. We are also creating content for our kids as they remain out of school and will post those online as well. We have also made 25 of our parks available to act as free meal sites for children and we remain open to other ways to provide much needed services during this time. CAPITAL AREA TRANSIT SYSTEM (CATS)

BILL DEVILLE

Public transportation was deemed an essential service, helping people get back and forth to work and connecting them to essential needs.

We clean and sanitize vehicles every night and are providing our operators with PPE though we are having a hard time maintaining our supply. We have roped off seats limiting the bus to no more than 10 passengers and have cancelled fares and allowed for entrance and exit from the rear door to protect our operators and the public. Despite a significant portion of our revenue being lost with the cancelled fares, we are proud to say that, unlike other city's transportation services, we have not had any layoffs. MID-CITY REDVELOPMENT ALLIANCE

SAM SANDERS

We have shifted the entire operation to remote status with some limited access of the office at this time. Our full complement of programs remain viable, although we have had to integrate technology where possible to keep our connections to the community.

Our real estate development work has slowed due to limiting the number of people on worksites and we have had to pause some of our rehab services, especially the projects that require entry to a client's home. Our goal is to resume all production once the stay-at-home order is lifted. We remain committed to helping individuals and families figure out how to make ends meet with the resources they have available. Our connections will be leveraged to help them get through the tough time. Click here for more information from Mid-City Redevelopment

EBR PARISH HOUSING AUTHORITY

J. DANIELS

Our main goal was to keep the team focused, establishing priorities: wellness of residents and team members; continuity of services; communication with residents. Council on Aging delivered 2 weeks worth of meals to residents and BRCATS has been advising of bus route changes.

Most kids do not have adequate broadband and digital access so we are working to remedy that reaching out to broadband and cellular providers to address divide. Greater conversations will develop the next two weeks.

BUILD BATON ROUGE

CHRIS TYSON

Our staff is majority grant staff and administering federal obligations. Majority of our work does not lend itself to working from home due to volume of physical files. The rest of the team are working from home and communicating virtually. We are charged with administering HUD stimulus money which will require a ramp up with staff and maintain existing deal flow. URBAN RESTORATION ENHANCEMENT CORPORATION (UREC)

CARL DILLON

Our team is working remotely and collaboratively with community partners to develop creative ways to reach the families we serve. We are utilizing online platforms to facilitate after school enrichment activities for local youth, maintaining safe and affordable housing commitments, and sharing resources with the community through social media and other avenues. BATON ROUGE NORTH ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT DISTRICT

JERRY JONES

We are encouraging small businesses to apply for the SBA loan opportunity. Many feel discouraged due to being denied in the past but would like to encourage you to try again. We're also working to provide uniform information so as not to perpetuate confusion. Click here for more information about BRNEDD

About The Urban Update

The Urban Update is a quarterly newsletter featuring our city's leading institutions as their solutions, innovations and ideas to address our city's most challenging issues. Each Update is a collaboration between BREC, Build Baton Rouge, CATS, Council on Aging, EBR Housing Authority, Impact Baton Rouge, LA Primary Care Association, MidCity Redevelopment Alliance and MetroMorphosis.
